MLI98591	545748.5	365269.6	An enclosure and ditches at Hunger Hill recorded on aerial photographs. The photographs show a rectilinear ditched enclosure and another possible enclosure. They appear to be overlain by medieval ridge and furrow, suggesting that they are earlier in date.	MON	Unknown
MLI98609	554515.3	377825.3	A coastguard station and rocket house are recorded on the first edition and second edition Ordnance Survey maps. They are no longer in existence.	BLD	Post-medieval
MLI98821	548595.1	369859.3	Hasthorpe is a small place in Willoughby with Sloothby parish. It is mentioned in Domesday book where it is subordinate to Willoughby and has a minimum population of nine. It is named Haroldestorp in Domesday which is a combination of the Old Danish personal name 'Harald' and 'Thorpe' meaning secondary settlement, presumably of Willoughby. The settlement is intermittently found in medieval documentation from the mid-13th century to early 14th century.	MON	Medieval
MLI115847	554876.7	376718.5	A Second World War pillbox to the north of Anderby Creek was identified during analysis of aerial photographs in July 2004.	MON	Post-medieval

HER/NHLE ref	Easting	Northing	Description	Asset Type	Period/Date
MLI42189	546926.8	366703.2	Gunby is mentioned in 1086 and later and was separately assessed in the early 14th century subsidy rolls. 15 families were living there in the reign of Elizabeth I. Surface evidence indicates old field banks and drainage channels. Air photos show hollow ways, toft sites and probable ponds. The church and hall appear to be built over the old village site.	MON	Medieval
MLI116150	547915.9	371268.8	Roma Cottage. The building originates from the early 18th century when it was built as a single-storey structure. It is of red brick, now largely obscured by a 20th century cement render, and features a relatively modern roof of red clay pantiles. Considerable alterations and extensions were made throughout its life, notably in the 19th century when the structure was raised to two-storeys, and in the 20th century, when large, single-storey timber extensions were added. Little of the original fixtures, fitting and joinery can now be seen inside. The building is thought to have adjoined a former malt house to the west (see PRN 49258), which may suggest that it originally had some possible industrial use.	BLD	Post-medieval
MLI42235	545004.4	365364.8	The Baptist Chapel at Monksthorpe was constructed in c.1701. It was built in a remote location, 1 mile to the northeast of Great Steeping. It is a plain rectangular box of brick and pantile and is single storey with sash windows.	BLD	Post-medieval
MLI124896	545017.5	365373.9	Mid-19th century former cottage and stables block at Monksthorpe Baptist Chapel. The structure was built in 1858, and is a rectangular, single-storey building of red brick with a pitched roof of terracotta tiles. It was constructed to provide accommodation for the chapel keeper, and to provide housing for the horses of those	BLD	Post-medieval

MLI124897	544924.7	365353.9	Mid-19th century former pigsty at Monksthorpe Baptist Chapel. The structure likely dates to the 1860s, when permission was given for the chapel keeper to fence off the western end of the burial ground for use as an orchard and kitchen garden. The small structure was built of red brick and featured a pitched roof, sloping down to the north, and an open pen to the south. The structure had largely collapsed when it was surveyed and was in a ruinous condition.	MON	Post-medieval
MLI124898	544973.4	365351.8	The burial ground at the Monksthorpe Baptist Chapel is depicted on the 2nd edition 25 inch Ordnance Survey County Series map. It likely dates to 1701, when the church it serves was built (see PRN 42235).	MON	Post-medieval

Originally there were four pairs of millstones; in the early 20th century a further pair was installed, run by an engine housed in an exterior engine-shed. The mill was in regular use until 1953, after which date the engine was removed and the mill fell into disrepair. In 1975 the mill passed into the care of the Secretary of State and was subsequently restored to working order. The monument includes the mill, a Grade I Listed building, complete with gear, sails and other fittings; it also includes the base of the engine-shed and buried remains associated with an earlier post mill which the tower mill was built to replace. The buildings form a one storey brick structure opened to its pitched roofs. The earliest phase is at the point where the southern wing joins the extension of the listed granary forming the southern wing of the complex. The old barn shows several construction phases. The southern elevation is constructed from handmade bricks, but the five original windows and the lower halves of two stable doors have been filled in the 19th century machine made bricks. All the rooms in the complex have been floored with handmade bricks with the exception of the northern stable, which is floored with rough mosaic tiles. In 2003 the eastern stable is recorded as being in a poorer state of repair than the other buildings, part of the western wall had collapsed, the roof deteriorated, and part of the eastern and southern walls have been rebuilt. 4864	538892	323733	Fleet was designated in February 1995. There are entries in the Domesday Book for the medieval settlement of fleet. The name 'Fleot' or 'Flet' is derived from the Old English meaning 'a stream or creek'. It has been suggested that an earlier mention of a place named Angarhala may refer to Fleet. Apart from being in the same general region, Fleet, along with the other three villages, were subsequently owned by Earl Aelfgar prior to the Norman invasion. Medieval settlement was concentrated north and east of the 12th century church of St Mary Magdelene. This period also saw the gradual shift of the focus of the settlement to the north at Fleet Hargate, which was granted a market in the early 14th century.	Conservation Area

4865	539478	325031	Fleet Hargate was designated in March 2001. The medieval period saw a gradual shift of the focus of the settlement to the north at Fleet Hargate. A market to be held in Fleet was granted to Thomas de Multon, by King John in 1205, which was believed to have been held in Fleet Hargate. Fleet Hargate also had a hospital. Much of the early documentary history of Fleet centres around reclamation of fen and marsh and maintenance of the drainage systems (for example in the records of the Commissioners of Sewers). By the time of the conquest (AD 1066) a sea bank had been constructed across the Fleet estuary presumably after the Fleet River had silted up.	Conservation Area
4866	544527	318588	Tydd St Mary was designated in January 1970. It is first mentioned in the Saxon charters relating to Thorney Abbey which state that the estate was bought by Bishop Aethelwod from Ealdormann Aethelwine and given to Thorney Abbey. The place-name is derived from the Old English meaning slight hill, which was probably a saltern mound (Cameron 1998, 130; Cameron, K, 1998; A Dictionary of Lincolnshire Place-names). Reclamation of the land began in the 1200s.	Conservation Area

4867	545037	317956	Tydd Gote is a village partly in the civil parish of Tydd St Mary and partly of Tydd St Giles. The conservation area covers the core of the village and was designated in August 1975. The land was originally a common grazing area for livestock. It was reclaimed between 1660 and 1811, and inhabitants were able to purchase their common marsh if they marked and drained the land. The Dictionary of British Place Names defines 'tid' as small hill from the Old English 'titt', and 'gote' as sluice.	Conservation Area
