1 Historic Environment Gazetteers

1.1 Designated heritage assets

- 1.1.1 Table 1.1 presents all identified heritage assets located within the study area. The assets are arranged in ascending National Heritage List for England (NHLE) ID number (a single potential Military Aircraft Crash Site is included with its relevant Historic Environment Record (HER) ID number. This asset is not part of the NHLE).
- 1.1.2 The first column gives the Section (Figure 2.1 Zoning Plan) of the Proposed Onshore Scheme in which the asset is located. There are the following 13 Sections: OHL (Overhead Lines Section), CS (proposed Converter Station Site), A1 and A2 (proposed Underground High Voltage Alternating Current (HVAC) Cable Corridor), and B1, B2, B3, B4, C1, C2, C3, C4, D/Landfall (proposed Underground High Voltage Direct Current (HVDC) Cable Corridor and the proposed Landfall Site). The second column states whether the asset is located within the Draft Order Limits (DOL) or the study area (up to 1km).

C3	Study area	1005962	Blythburgh Priory	Scheduled monument	Medieval	Small Augustinian priory founded circa 1125 as a dependency of St Osyth's, Essex with three canons. Four cannons were recorded at the Priory's dissolution in 1537. The standing ruins of the priory church were recorded on 18th and 19th century engravings and were noted as having been robbed of material to repair roads etc in the mid-19th century. Ruins of the priory church remain upstanding, including parts of the crossing and a length of nave wall, up to 3.5m high. The claustral buildings were on the south side of the church are now under ornamental gardens. Remains have also been found in the ploughed field to the north. Sherds of Ipswich ware have come from the vicinity of the priory.

C2	Study area	1007682	Moated site at Lymball's Farm	Scheduled monument	Medieval	Lymball's Farm has been identified as the site of the manor variously known as Lenwales, Lembalde's or Lymbold's of which there are records in the 13th and 14th centuries. The monument includes a moated site, located north of a minor road in the parish of Westleton. The moat ditch, which is approximately 3m deep and varies from 5m to 11m in width, encloses a sub-rectangular island with maximum internal dimensions of 61m north-south by 38m east-west, giving maximum overall dimensions of 73m north-south by 55m east-west. The interior is now unoccupied but there is evidence that a house once stood within the north-western quarter. Foundations of a building have been noted in this area, at a depth of approximately 0.4m, and there is a scatter of building material, including roof tile, on the surface. The moated site at Lymball's Farm survives well and contains evidence, including foundations, of a building which stood on the central island. It will retain valuable archaeological information concerning the construction and use of the site.

C3	Study area	1011381	Bowl barrow west of Fen Covert, 305m south of Fen Cottage	Scheduled monument	Bronze Age	The monument includes a bowl barrow situated on low-lying heathland to the west of Westwood Marshes. It is visible as an earthen mound standing to a height of c.1m and covering a sub-circular area which measures 22m east-west by 25m north-south. In the north-western edge of the mound, a crescent-shaped hollow, measuring 9m by 6m, marks the site of an exploration, probably carried out early in the 19th century. The northern side of the mound, the original diameter of which was about 22m, has been extended c.3m by upcast from this excavation. The greater part of the barrow survives well and retains important archaeological information
D	Study area	1011382	Bowl barrow on Tinker's Walks, 950m WSW of Eastwoodlodg e Farm	Scheduled monument	Bronze Age	The monument includes a bowl barrow situated on heathland, beside a road, the B1387, which clips it on the north-west side. It is visible as an earthen mound standing to a height of 0.65m and covering a sub-circular area with a maximum diameter of 38m on a north-east to south-west axis. The greater part of the barrow survives well and retains important archaeological information.
D	Study area	1011385	Bowl barrow on Tinker's Walks, 740m west of Eastwoodlodg e Farm	Scheduled monument	Bronze Age	The monument includes a bowl barrow sited above a north-facing slope overlooking the estuary of the River Blyth. The barrow is visible as an earthen mound covering a circular area c.22m in diameter and standing to a maximum height of 1.1m. Near the centre is an irregular hollow in the surface, measuring 4.5m by 4.5m by 0.8m deep, which marks the site of an old excavation. On the south and south-eastern sides are two other, more sharply defined rectangular holes, measuring 4.5m by 3m by 0.8m deep and 3m by 3m by 1m deep respectively. The barrow survives well and retains important archaeological information, the scale of disturbance resulting from the digging of three holes into the mound being small in relation to the monument as a whole.

D	Study area	N/A	Southwold	Conservation area	-	This conservation area includes land on the northern side of the Blyth estuary and includes historic quay at the southern edge of Southwold.
C2	Study area	N/A	Westleton	Conservation area	-	Westleton is a village, which, despite a significant amount of 20th Century development having taken place, still retains a strong traditional character. Vernacular buildings and traditional cottages still dominate visually, with other older structures such as brick and flint walls, workshops, storage and ancillary buildings reinforcing the overall character of the village. Westleton has some unique features, not least the village green which has an attractive pond at the southern end. The Green is sizeable and well kept - an elongated triangle narrowing northwards towards the brow of the hill. The form and layout of the village is also quite special; the historic core is sited around a complex series of road junctions which create a number of attractive triangular spaces.

C1	Study area	N/A	Darsham	Conservation area	-	The overall character of the Conservation Area is that of an enclave of traditional buildings dotted around narrow green lanes forming a highly attractive historic core. Occupying the large spaces which exist between the buildings is an abundance of mature hedgerows and trees which create a strong arboreal and verdant setting. The Conservation Area is centred upon All Saints Church and the grounds of Darsham House. The sheer size, position and splendour of the parish church mean that it dominates the area, its tall tower visible above the trees and the quality of this building, alongside Darsham House, forms an effective contrast with the humble character of surrounding dwellings.
D	DOL	N/A	Walberswick	Conservation area	-	Walberswick is a semi - isolated village, located some two and a half miles to the east of the A12, and accessed by a single road, the B1387. The Walberswick Conservation Area is primarily located along the main axial road through the village, commencing at the west end by St. Andrew's Church, and continuing east towards the Ferry Road quay area. Within the Walberswick Conservation Area are side roads along which several houses of architectural distinction area located. The centre of the village is defined by the village green; a large open space and an important village and tourist amenity. The building stock within the Conservation Area is extremely varied, including an impressive and picturesque Grade I listed part ruinous church as well as a mix of Grade II listed former farmhouses, dwellings, and agricultural/commercial buildings, the majority conforming to a fairly limited palette of local vernacular materials.

C3	Study area	N/A	Blythburgh	Conservation area	-	Blythburgh is a small riverside village which contains many cottages grouped amongst trees and hedgerows along a network of narrow lanes. The village is widely noted for its church and marshland setting which combine to give dramatic views on the approaches to the village.
CS	Study area	N/A	Saxmundham	Conservation area	-	The overall character of Saxmundham is one of a reasonably well-preserved historic Suffolk market town of picturesque and attractive appearance. In particular, the town centre and roads leading from the High Street retain the special characteristics that strongly justify its Conservation Area designation. At the heart of the town is the historic Market Place. This area is located to the west of The High Street and hidden from the road by a row of commercial premises and dwellings. The High Street runs approximately north – south, and generally the most high status buildings found in Saxmundham abut this road. Those premises located within the town centre are largely commercial (often with domestic accommodation above) whereas to the northern and southern extremities of the Conservation Area, as well as to the tributary roads to the east and west, domestic properties are found. Those dwellings located close to the railway station tend to be of 19th century date, smaller in scale and more concentrated in terms of spatial density. Scattered around this area are former commercial and industrial sites, including land once occupied by the gas works and the site of a maltings complex north east of the station. Closer to the Market Place buildings tend to be of 16th, 17th and 18th century date, whereas to the north and south extremities of the Conservation Area sizeable individual properties from the 18th and 19th century, and set in private gardens and landscapes, are found.

C3	Study area	1030710	Holy Trinity Church	Grade I listed building	Medieval	Parish Church with medieval origins, designated Grade I listed due to the quantity of surviving medieval material. The tower dates to the early-mid 14th century with the remainder mid-late 15th century in date. Random flint with stone dressings. Lean-to aisle roofs with traceried spandrels. The church contains an octagonal font, c.1450, formerly carved with the Seven Sacraments, eighteen 15th century nave benches with carved

						finials, a 15th lectern, pulpit c.1670, fine alms box dated 1473 with traceried carving, mid- late 17th Clock Jack at east end of south aisle, and 15th century wooden aisle screens, with the nave screen a modern reconstruction to the same pattern. The choir stalls have finely carved frontals with sixteen figures of Apostles and Saints, possibly once forming the rood loft parapet. A notable monument to Sir John Hopton (d.1489) and Purbeck marble tomb chest (brasses missing) with 3 cusped quatrefoils with painted shields, richly traceried and crested canopy, survive within the . Another plain tomb chest in north aisle; several 17th century carved marble floor slabs in chancel; fragments of medieval stained glass in aisle windows.
C2	Study area	1198791	Church Of All Saints	Grade I listed building	Medieval	Parish Church. Medieval, including 15th century square tower, restored 1879 and 1887. Designated Grade I listed due to the quantity of surviving medieval material. Mainly coursed flint rubble, stone dressings, south wall of nave and chancel plastered, with plain tiled roofs. Church contains an early 15th octagonal font with well-preserved carved panels and stem, nave with 18 15th century poppyhead bench ends (14 of them with traceried panelling) 2 further poppyhead bench ends in chancel; early 17th century pulpit and holy table, Royal Arms of George IV over north doorway,

						cinquefoil headed niche to splay of central south nave window. North chancel with fine wall monument to Sir Thomas Bedingfield (d.1660): alabaster and marble, with flanking columns supporting a pediment with 2 reclining figures; portrait brass on chancel floor to Ann Bedingfield (d.1641); late 19th century stained glass to chancel and south nave.
B3	Study area	1227756	Church Of St Peter	Grade I listed building	Medieval	Parish church. Designated Grade I listed due to the quantity of surviving medieval material. The building is 12th century with early 14th, 15th and 19th century additions and restoration. Flint, with some rendering; thatched nave and chancel. 12th century round tower with 15th century west window. The church contains a 15th century octagonal font and 15th century pulpit on modern base. Rood loft stairs with original door in north nave wall. Triple sedilia and trefoil-headed piscina in south sanctuary wall; aumbry with original door in north sanctuary wall. Part of fine stone traceried image niche in north vestry wall, evidently moved from elsewhere in the church.
D	Study area	1283823	St Andrew's Church	Grade I listed building	Medieval	Parish church, designated Grade I listed due to the quantity of surviving medieval material. Originally nave and chancel with 18-bay clerestory, 6-bay north and south aisles, west tower and south porch; only the tower, porch and westernmost 4 bays of the south aisle are now in use, the remainder being in ruins. Random flint with some random brick, knapped flint to tower, porch facade and part of nave, stone dressings and lead roof. Very fine tower, commenced 1426, not quite square on plan. The church contains a 15th century octagonal font with carved bowl and stem, fine 15th century pulpit richly carved with quatrefoils, lower part of 15th century rood screen with traceried panels, some chancel benches with re-used 15th traceried ends with poppyheads; 3 early 16th century marble floor slabs.

C1	Study area	1030647	Holy Trinity Church	Grade II* listed building	Medieval	Parish church. Medieval, restored mid-19th century, considerably damaged by fire 1955. Nave and chancel (under one roof), west tower, south porch. Random flint rubble, the nave and chancel mostly re-faced mid-20th century with plaintiled roof. 15th century square tower, 4 stages and crenelated parapet, diagonal buttresses to west face only.
C2	Study area	1198761	Darsham House	Grade II* listed building	Post Medieval	House. Dated 'IBK 1679' on left hand gable end, now in a first floor bedroom (modern copy of datestone on facade); rear range c.1730; service wing to south c.1750; 2 bay extension to north added early 20th century. Original house: red brick, glazed pantiles; moulded brick band at first floor and eaves level, flat parapet; 2 storeys and attic; 8 window range, sashes with glazing bars in flush frames, flat brick arches; mid-late 19th from the architect Sir Reginald Blomfield's 'Cross of Sacrifice' for the Imperial (now Commonwealth) War Graves Commission. Variations on Blomfield's design appeared in stone masons' catalogues and were chosen for local war memorials across England. It was dedicated on 22 May 1920 by Ven J G R Darling and unveiled by Miss Monica Heywood. It includes the names of 15 men of the parish who died during the First World War. Following the Second World War the seven names of the fallen of that conflict were added to the memorial along with the dates 1939 - 1945.

On board was United States Navy Lieutenant (Lt.) Joseph Patrick Kennedy Jr., the elder brother of the future American President J.F. Kennedy. The aircraft was part of a secret mission using an experimental system to attack a German V-weapon site in occupied France (probably a V-3 "supergun" site at Mimoyeques). The system and the special United States Navy unit that operated it were codenamed "Project Anvil" - the Navy version of a similar project called "Aphrodite". The premise of the system was the deployment of a "Drone" aircraft (the Liberator) packed with Torpex high explosives, which once started on its flight by a picked crew of two people, would be guided to crash into its target by radio remote control by a "mother-ship" aircraft. The crew of the "Drone" were intended to have previously bailed out over England on radio control being firmly established. The other crew-member was Lt. Wilford John Willy, who designed most of the weapons system. First based at Dunkeswell in Devon, the project moved to Fersfield Airfield on July 31st 1944. The Drone was equipped with a nose camera that was part of the aircraft's remote guidance system, codenamed "Block". Although the cause of the explosion was not conclusively proven, it may have been because of lack of electrical shielding on "Block"- causing a detonator to set off the Torpex. The resulting huge explosion scattered wreckage over a large area, estimated at three by two miles across. The remains of the crew were never found. Contemporary aerial photographs of the immediate area do not show any major damage relating to the crash. Should any traces relating to the incident be found, they would be covered by the 1986 Military Remains Act, and a licence from the Ministry of Defence would be required to recover them.

1.2 Non-designated heritage assets

1.2.1 Table 1.2 presents all non-designated heritage assets identified within the study area. The assets are arranged in ascending HER ID number (using the HER PrefRef number), followed by an asset with a UID number. The first column gives the Section (shown on Figure 2.1 Zoning Plan) of the Proposed Onshore Scheme in which the asset is located. There are the following 13 Sections: OHL (Overhead Lines Section), CS (proposed Converter Station Site), A1 and A2 (proposed Underground HVAC Cable Corridor), and B1, B2, B3, B4, C1, C2, C3, C4, D/Landfall (proposed Underground HVDC Cable Corridor and the proposed Landfall Site). The second column states whether the asset is located within the Draft Order Limits or the 500m study area.

The original line ran between Halesworth and Haddiscoe in 1854. The whole line opened in 1859. It remains in use. The Halesworth, Beccles and Haddiscoe Railway was incorporated in 1851 to join the river ports of Halesworth and Beccles to the Reedham - Lowestoft line of the Norfolk Railway with which, in 1852, it was empowered to make a working agreement. Operated by the ECR, it opened in 1855. Renamed the East Suffolk Railway in 1854, in that same year it gained authorisation to raise further capital to extend to Yarmouth and South to Woodbridge, where the EUR had undertaken to meet it from Ipswich. The scheme included branches to Leiston, Framlingham and Snape. The extension and branches opened on June 1st 1859, the same day that the Ipswich - Woodbridge section was opened by the ECR. CS	Study area	SXM 021	Hall Farm, Saxmundham	Post Medieval	The two brick farm buildings recorded herein formerly belonged to Hurts Hall, a fine Victorian red brick mansion in the Elizabethan style which replaced the previous house on the site after its destruction by fire in 1890. The property lay in extensive parkland 450 metres south of the parish church and from the 17th century until the 1950s belonged to the Long family, whose wealth derived chiefly from Jamaican plantations. The site can be equated with the medieval manor of Hurtz or Hurts held by Roger Bigot at Domesday, and preserves a number of early-19th century outbuildings of gentry status including a fine stable block with a turret clock to which a domestic house was attached in the early-20th century. The two structures to the east of this stable are now in separate ownership and were built as part of a new yard complex in circa 1870. The northernmost building is now fragmentary, with its western half demolished in recent years and its remaining fabric extensively mutilated, rendering any precise interpretation impossible. It appears to have been designed in part as a potting shed associated with an adjacent walled garden, and retains a finely detailed doorway. The building to the west is an impressive two-storied granary with a series of vehicle sheds on its ground floor. Although little altered externally, its original grain bins and other fixtures and fittings have been lost, and neither building is of sufficient age or historic interest to justify listing.

2 Statements of Significance

2.1 Significance and importance of designated assets, and setting contribution

2.1.1 Table 1.4 presents the heritage interests, significance, and importance of all designated heritage assets located within the study area, as well as the contribution made to their significance by their setting. The assets are arranged in ascending NHLE ID number, followed by an asset with a HER ID number. The first column gives the Section (shown on Figure 2.1 Zoning Plan) of the Proposed Onshore Scheme in which the asset is located. There are the following 13 Sections: OHL (Overhead Lines Section), CS (proposed Converter Station Site), A1 and A2 (proposed Underground HVAC Cable Corridor), and B1, B2, B3, B4, C1, C2, C3, C4, D/Landfall (proposed Underground HVDC Cable Corridor and the proposed Landfall Site). The second column states whether an asset is within the Draft Order Limits or study area.

1287864	Church Of St Mary	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	This church is of significance for its more than special architectural and historic interest, with its surviving medieval work being of particular architectural and historic interest. There is archaeological interest within the church and its churchyard, and excavations in 1983 and 1988 revealed new features of note: in the north nave wall a round-arched door evidently of 12th century date, and to the east of the south door a staircase dating probably to the 14th century. This asset also holds artistic interest, which is evident in interior fixtures and fittings, including the fine wood coat of arms of James I, the early 17th century pulpit, and the octagonal font.	This asset is located within the centre of a large historic churchyard, with rows of extant headstones and areas of open space. To the west of the churchyard are village buildings, including Friston Town Hall. To the east, is a large open-sided storage shed for agricultural use, with further village buildings to the northeast. To the south are open arable fields. To the north, across Church Road which bounds the churchyard on its northern side, is a large, grassed field, with arable fields beyond this. The church sits within a flat landscape, and there are long views from the churchyard, and through the plain-glass windows from within the interior of the church, across the fields to the north and south. The church tower is	High has otherwise substantially changed from the 1890s to the present, with the demolition of a complex of buildings to the west of the house allowing for the present farm complex. Surviving historic buildings to the west of the house and within its grounds make a positive contribution to its value, as does the open green space around the house and to the east, which, along with the routeway, suggest the form of the house's historic grounds, albeit much modified since the 1890s. The modern farm complex and pond to the west are large, intrusive elements into the landscape, and make a negative contribution to the house's value.

2.2 Significance and importance of non-designated heritage assets, and setting contribution

2.2.1 Table 1.5 presents the heritage interests, significance, and importance of all non-designated heritage assets located within the study area, as well as the contribution made to their significance by their setting. The assets are arranged in descending HER ID number (using the HER PrefRef number). Assets not within the HER are assigned a UID number and can be found at the end of the table. The first column gives the Section (shown in Figure 2.1 Zoning Plan) of the Proposed Onshore Scheme in which the asset is located. There are the following 13 Sections: OHL (Overhead Lines Section), CS (proposed Converter Station site), A1 and A2 (proposed Underground HVAC Cable Corridor), and B1, B2, B3, B4, C1, C2, C3, C4, D/Landfall (proposed Underground HVDC Cable Corridor and the proposed Landfall Site). The second column states whether an asset is with the Draft Order Limits or study area.
